

MANY FORKS FARM will be in its 13th growing season in 2024 in Clarksburg, Massachusetts. The farm grows a diverse range of vegetables using sustainable, environmentally-attentive, and regenerative agriculture practices without synthetic fertilizers, pesticides, herbicides, or GMOs. We use hand-tended, and low and no-till approaches to raise healthful, beautiful vegetables for your household's table.

Community-supported agriculture (CSA) is a relationship between community members, a farm, and a farmer. The farmer knows the community members whose food she is growing, and the community members know who is growing their food. Farm members commit to receiving a portion of the farm's produce by paying for their share in advance of the season. In this way, they participate in both the bounty and the risks inherent in farming - as some crops will do well and others may do less well due to such factors as weather, pests, or crop diseases. Shares contain produce available at that time of the season - a truly local, seasonal way of eating!

You pick up your vegetables at the farm on Wednesdays 3PM-7PM weekly from mid-June through mid-October for 20 weeks. On distribution day, you will have an opportunity to fill your bags with vegetables from that week's list of choices as well as enjoy picking some crops, when they are in season — such as peas, beans, cherry tomatoes, kales, raspberries, as well as a selection of fresh herbs and flowers.
